Berlin, May 24, 2021. Deutsche Wohnen SE and Vonovia SE today signed an agreement to combine the two companies. In this context, Vonovia has announced to launch a voluntary public takeover offer for all outstanding shares in Deutsche Wohnen. Shareholders receive a total of 53.03 euros, consisting of an offer price of 52.00 euros in cash per share and a cash dividend of 1.03 euros per Deutsche Wohnen share proposed to the Annual General Meeting of Deutsche Wohnen on June 1, 2021. This corresponds to a premium of 17.9 % on the closing price of Deutsche Wohnen on May 21, 2021 and of 25.0 % on the weighted average price of Deutsche Wohnen shares over the last three months up to May 21, 2021, thus valuing Deutsche Wohnen at approx. 18 billion euros (on undiluted basis).

Deutsche Wohnen’s Executive Board and Supervisory Board support the offer and intend to recommend its acceptance to the shareholders. In the boards’ opinion, the offer reflects the intrinsic value of the Deutsche Wohnen share and includes an attractive premium. The boards of Deutsche Wohnen also welcome the strategic benefit of the combination and the added value it will generate for all parties. The combination of the two companies offers the opportunity to address the strategic challenges on the housing market even more consistently.

Michael Zahn, CEO of Deutsche Wohnen: “The market environment has become increasingly similar for Vonovia and Deutsche Wohnen in recent years. Now is the right moment to combine the proven performance and strengths of both companies. Together we will create new perspectives for our employees, our tenants and our owners.”

Goals of the business combination and “Future and Social Housing Pact” for Berlin

The business combination will create Europe’s largest residential real estate group with a combined market capitalisation of currently around 45 billion euros and more than 500,000 apartments with a combined real estate value of approx. 90 billion euros. The combined company has a robust business model with a long-term focus. The necessary investments in affordable housing, climate protection and new construction can be better shouldered together following the combination of the two companies.

Through the combination, Deutsche Wohnen and Vonovia aim to create a tenant-oriented and socially responsible housing company that can reliably contribute to necessary solutions, especially for the Berlin housing market, in close partnership with politics.

Together, the two companies assume responsibility for a social and sustainable housing policy within a “Future and Social Housing Pact” with the State of Berlin:

- › Limitation of rent increases until 2026: Over the next three years, Deutsche Wohnen and Vonovia will limit their regular rent increases across their Berlin portfolios as a whole to a maximum of one percent per year, and in the two years thereafter only in line with inflation. In the case of modernizations for climate protection, the companies agree to go beyond the statutory requirements and the modernization allocation to a maximum of 2 euros per square meter.
- › Fostering new construction in Berlin: The two companies plan to push new construction in Berlin in the coming years.
- › Fostering housing for young families in new construction and preventing homelessness: In order to help young families with children find housing, the two companies are offering these families four-room apartments at 10 percent below the average new rent for the respective district when the apartments are newly rented. In addition, Deutsche Wohnen and Vonovia want to make an effective contribution to preventing homelessness and people losing their homes. In the long term, they will make a three-digit number of apartments in Berlin available for the prevention of homelessness.
- › Contribution to the expansion of the municipal housing stock: The two companies are planning a combination and offering the state to acquire a significant number of apartments from their portfolio in this context.

Key Elements of the Business Combination Agreement

Deutsche Wohnen and Vonovia have entered into a Business Combination Agreement which sets out the key elements of the transaction. In the event of a successful completion of the Transaction, the following shall apply:

- › The combined company is to operate under the name “Vonovia SE”.
